ENGLEWOOD, Colo., Feb 24, 2009 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- Prime Time Communications announced today it intends to acquire Utah-based internet service provider Mstar in a deal that will benefit both companies and provide Mstar subscribers with enhanced voice and video services. Prime Time Communications and Mstar have been working on this deal for several months and plan to finalize the transaction in March. Prime Time Communications is an Englewood, Colorado-based, fiber-to-the-home internet, video, and phone provider. Prime Time's IPTV and phone products will be important new offerings for Mstar's customer base.

"Prime Time has the infrastructure that Mstar needs to deliver its video and phone solution efficiently and with better quality," Mstar CEO Stephen Russo said. "We will continue to deliver the advanced technology and services our customers and partners have come to expect, but now have an even stronger service set to offer them," Russo said.

Prime Time Communications will continue on Mstar's path as the premier provider of data, voice, and video services on the Utopia fiber optic network in the state of Utah. Prime Time serves over 5,500 customers throughout Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Mississippi and Kansas. Fiber optic internet connections allow the fastest speeds in the nation for single-family residences, with standard speeds starting at 15 Mbps. Prime Time Communications CEO Mark Wentzlaff called the acquisition "a major step forward for both companies." "The continued expansion of the fiber-to-the-home technology allows for the delivery of expanded services. Prime Time's advanced internet protocol triple-play will provide Mstar subscribers with more video content, expanded voice features and the fastest internet speeds," Wentzlaff said.
